Armenia as a constituent part of ancient civilization is known to history from ancient times.

Since IV-II century B.C. the Armenian-populated all districts had been divided into three big administrative units: Pokr Hayk, Tsopk and Mets Hayk that in II century B.C. became independent states. Among them the most powerful was Mets Hayk state, where since II century B.C. till V century B.C. first Artashesyans ruled, then Arshakunies.

The Mets Hayk contained of 15 lands that all together had 191 provinces. Those "lands" were followings: Tayk, Bardzr Hayk, Chorrord Hayk, Aghdznik, Korchek, Mekk, Parskahayk, Paytakaran, Artsakh, Utik, Syunik, Gugark, Turuberan, Vaspurakan and Ayrarat, that was the most known "land" as political, economic and cultural life centre.

In new and newest times the territory of historical Armenia was divided into western and eastern parts that were included in Osman Turkey and Iran (since 1828 in Russia).

In soviet times the Armenia's territory was divided into 37 districts.

The current administrative and territorial division of the Republic of Armenia - 10 marzes and Yerevan city with the marz status has been formed in 1995 according to the RA Law "On administrative and territorial division of RA".
